Scituate resident Richard Johnson, a seasoned professional with over 30 years experience in senior living and healthcare, has been appointed executive director for Village at Proprietors Green, a senior living community currently under construction near Roche Bros. in Marshfield. Since 1996, Johnson has been associated with Norwell-based Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group, developers of Village at Proprietors Green, in partnership with National Development of Newton.

“In addition to luxury apartments, we are offering an array of services designed to make life simpler for our residents, including dining and housekeeping as well as continuing education options, on-site fitness and a range of wellness programs,” Johnson said. “We will offer 24-hour emergency response.”

The 149-apartment rental community is scheduled to open in March. In the coming months, Johnson will be supporting the leasing efforts, hiring department managers and becoming familiar with the new building layout and construction, as well as the technology being used for building systems. He is also developing resident services and programs.

“I am looking forward to continuing the Welch Healthcare tradition of providing quality senior services with a dedicated caring staff,” Johnson said.
